REFERENCES

“The humoral immune response of cattle vaccinated with combined oil adjuvant vaccine against blackleg and FMD disease”.

“Immunological studies on Clostridium chauvoei and trials for the preparation of vaccines “.
Ph. D. Thesis (Bacteriology, Mycology and Immunology), Fac. Vet. Med., Cairo University.

“Preparation and evaluation of a combined clostridial and rabies vaccine in sheep”.

“Control of brucellosis and blackleg in cattle by means of mixed vaccine”.
Biologicals, 30: 326.

Anbumani, S.P.; Moses, J.S. and Balaprakasam, R. (1972):
“An electrophoretic analysis of the efficacy of alum precipitated and aluminum hydroxide gel adsorbed vaccine against C. chauvoei”.
“Isolation and characterization of Clostridium chauvoei strains isolated from cases of blackleg in cattle in Iran”.
Archives de L, Institute Razi, 27:37-41.

“Immunological efficacy of combined vaccine against anaerobic infections”.
Veterinariya, Moscow, 12: 27.

“The immunizing power of three blackleg vaccines”.
Assiut Veterinary Medical Journal, 17: 201-211.

Awad, F.I.; Gadalla, M.S. and Farrag, Ikbal (1973):
“Studies on the aetiology of blackquarter in Egyptian cattle”.

Awad, F.I.; Gadalla, M.S. and Farrag, Ikbal (1974):
“Experimental infection of buffalo calves with Clostridium chauvoei”.

“An epidemiological survey of blackquarter of cattle in Western Sudan”.

“Detection and identification of PCR of in clinical isolates, bovine feces and substrates from biogas plant”.
References

“Study of a mixed vaccine against anthrax and blackleg”.

“Purification and characterization of the lethal toxin (alpha toxin) of Clostridium septicum”.

“Selected blackleg outbreaks and their relation to soil excavation”.

“Veterinary Medicine”.

“Clostridium septicum as a cause of pericarditis and mycotic aneurysm”.

British Veterinary Pharmacopoeia (2009):
The pharmaceutical Press, London.

Burdov, A.N. (1962):
“Simultaneous immunization of farm animals against anaerobic infection-combined vaccine against anthrax, malignant oedema and blackleg”.
References

“Potency testing of Clostridium septicum bacterins in sheep and laboratory animals”.

The preparation of immunogenic cell walls from highly protective strain of Clostridium chauvoei.

“Successful management of spontaneous Clostridium septicum myonecrosis”.

“Demonstration of complement fixing antibody in sera of cattle vaccinated with combined living blackleg anthrax vaccine”.

Claus, K.D. and Kolbe, D.R. (1979):
“Immunogenicity of Clostridium septicum in guinea pigs”.

Claus, K.D. and Macheak, M.E. (1972):
“Preparation of Clostridium chauvoei antigen and determination of protective immunity by plate agglutination test”.

Cooper, M.; Martinie, F.V. and Personeus, G.R. (1960):
“Further studies in Clostridium chauvoei infection and immunity in laboratory animals”.
Cornell Vet., 50: 301-308.

“Influence of culture conditions in growth and protective antigenicity of Clostridium chauvoei”.

“The development of an enzyme linked immunosorbent assay for measuring the potency of vaccines containing Clostridium chauvoei antigens”.

Crichton, R.; Harriss, D.A. and Mckay, D.J. (1986):
“Standards for C.chauvoei vaccine the relationship between the response of guinea pigs and sheep following vaccination and challenge with virulent C.chauvoei”.

“Blackleg and malignant oedema in fattening cattle in winter”.

Danielson, I.S. and Bolton, R. (1950):
“Laboratory studies on immunizing value of haemorrhagic septicemia bacterin of black leg bacterin”.

“pH changes of black quarter vaccine on cold storage”.

“Effect of booster vaccination with a multivalent clostridial bacterin-toxoid on sudden death syndrome mortality rate among feedlot cattle”.

Draganov, M. and Peichev, B. (1968):

“A case of Clostridium septicum spontaneous gas gangrene”.

“Immune response of cattle against Rift Valley fever and foot and mouth disease combined inactivated vaccine”.

Ebeid, M.H. (1979):
“Studies on blackleg disease among bovine”.

References

EL-Helw, H.A. (2004):

"Haemophilus somnus, Clostridium chauvoei and Clostridium septicum combined vaccine".

El-Sawi, M.O.; Tag El-Din, M.H. and El-Sanousi, S.M. (1990):

"Isolation and characterization of non flagellated and paralyzed flagellated mutants of Clostridium chauvoei".

EL-Sehemy, M.; El-Meneisy, A.A.; Abdallah, Y.A.; Hussien, A.S. and Roukyia, O. M. (2008):

"Immune response and keeping quality of necrotic enteritis vaccine in chicken using different adjuvants".

Eustis, S.L. and Bergeland, M.E. (1981):

"Suppurative abomasitis associated with Clostridium septicum infection".

Farrag, I. (1975):

"Studies on blackleg among bovines in Egypt".

"Some studies on a range of adjuvants for clostridial vaccines".
References

The 2nd General Conf. of ARC.

“Field studies on oil adjuvant clostridial vaccines”.

“Studies on concentrated oil adjuvant clostridial vaccines”.

Fatma, M. Ghanem (1987):

“Immune response of animals for combined black quarter and hemorrhagic septicemia vaccines”.

“A simple and rapid vortex method for preparing antigen/adjuvant emulsions for immunization”.

Freund, J.E. (2001):

“Modern Elementary Statistics”.
10th Ed., Prentice Hall.

“Safety and efficacy of water-in-oil-in-water emulsion vaccines containing Newcastle disease virus haemagglutinin- neuraminidase glycoprotein”.
Avian Path., 30: 509-516.

Gadalla, M.S. and Farrag, I. (1967):
“A new vaccine against blackleg disease”.

“Effect of growth requirement on the improvement of clostridial vaccines”.

“Clostridial myositis in lambs”.

“Evaluation of cost precision rations of different strategies for ELISA measurement of serum antibody levels”.

“Evaluation comparative de la valeur immunisante de deux variants de vaccine contre le charbon symptomatique”.

Grigoriu, N.; Corp, N.; Batura, I. and Balaci, M. (1965):
“Concentrated blackleg vaccine with excess aluminum hydroxide”.

References

“Improvement of Clostridium chauvoei vaccine”.

Hall, K.E. (1989):

“Treatment of a calf Clostridium chauvoei infection”.

Hamers, C.; Aboulhouda, Y.I.; Abdillah, Y. and Faharoudine, a. (1993):

“Note on livestock disease in Grande Comore (Islamic Federal Republic of Comoros)”.

“Enzyme linked immunosorbent assay for evaluation of immunity in mice vaccinated with blackleg vaccine”.

“Detection and characterization of clostridium species in soil of Zambia”.
- 111 -
References

Hassan, R.A. (1990):
“Studies on immune response of cattle against vaccination with combined vaccine of FMD and blackleg”.

“Requirement of N-glycanon GPI-anchored proteins for efficient binding of aerolysin but not Clostridium septicum α-toxin”.

“Practical Immunology”.

Hungerford, T.G. (1990):
“Diseases of livestock”.

Ioustau, J.A.R. (1968):
“Adjuvant for Clostridium chauvoei vaccine”.

“Studies on combined blackleg and hemorrhagic septicemia vaccine”.
Jiao, J. and Burgess, D.J. (2003):
“Rheology and stability of water-in-oil-in-water multiple emulsions containing span 83 and tween 80”.

“Water-in-oil emulsions and methods”.
USA Patent Application 20060110418.

“Simultaneous immunization of sheep against anthrax, pasteurellosis and clostridial infections”.
Kompleksnaya Vaktsinatsiya Ovets Veterinariya Moscow, USSR, 5: 38.

“Testing the immunogenicity of blackleg vaccines by challenging guinea pigs with dried spore cultures of C. chauvoei”.

“Preparation of concentrated C. chauvoei by the vat method”.

“Combined vaccine against blackleg, malignant oedema and pasteurellosis”.
Veterinariya Moscow, 8: 12.

“Field trials of a combined vaccine against blackleg, malignant oedema and pasteurellosis in cattle”.

“Possibility of using a mixed vaccine against Salmonella abortus and anaerobic disease of sheep”.
Recuil de Medecine Veterinaire, 149: 75.

Kennedy, K. (1976):

“Preparation and evaluation to Clostridium septicum toxoid”.

Kerim, A. (1986):

“The incidence of animal infection in the soil of some animal dwellings”.

Kerry, J.B. (1967):

“Immunological difference between strains of Clostridium chauvoei”.

“Antigenic mimicry of Clostridium chauvoei flagella by polyclonal anti-idiotype antibodies”.

Kucsera, G. and Berneath, S. (1972):
“Comparison of the efficacy of blackleg vaccines prepared in different ways”.

“Toxin synthesis and mucin breakdown are related to swarming phenomenon in Clostridium septicum”.

Macheak, M.E.; Claus, K.D. and Maloy, S.E. (1972):
“Potency testing Clostridium chauvoei containing bacterins: relationship of agglutination titers and tests in cattle”.

“Pathological changes in the pericardium and meninges of cattle associated with Clostridium chauvoei”.

Mario, R.De.O. (1969):
“Concentration of immunogens of Clostridium chauvoei by culture analysis”.

References

“Effect of temperature and glucose concentration on DNase production by Clostridium septicum”.

Matter, M.A.; Cortinas, T.I. and de Guzman, A.M. (2002):

“Immunogenic protein variations of Clostridium chauvoei cellular antigens associated with the culture growth phase”.

Mbengne, M.B. (2008):

“Isolation and identification in Senegal of the most immunogenic protein soluble antigen of a Clostridium chauvoei strain”.

Merck, B. (1998):

“Clostridial Infections IN: S.E. Aiello (ed.)”.

Micalizzi, B. and DeGuzan, A.M. (1997):

“Immunogenicity of an extract of Clostridium chauvoei in guinea pigs”.

Mohan, K. and Hadis, S.M. (1966):

“An experimental study on combined vaccine against hemorrhagic septicemia and black quarter in cattle”.

Munang’andu, H.M.; Muyoyeta, P.M.; Mweene, A.S. and Kida, H. (1996):

“MLST Analysis reveals a highly conserved core genome among poultry isolates of Clostridium septicum”.
An.29 [Epub a head of print].

Nilakantan, P.R. and Dahanda, M.R. (1964):
“Studies on the aetiology of blackquarter in Egyptian cattle”.

“Vaccination of cattle against blackleg”.
Veterinariya, Moscow, USSR, 4: 53.

Oblon, Spivak; McClelland Maier and Neustadt, P.C. (1998):
“Oil adjuvant vaccine and method for preparing some”.
U.S.Patent 5814321 (1920).

“Malignant edema in postpartum dairy cattle”.

“Prevention of blackleg by an immunogen of Clostridium chauvoei”.
“Epidemiological studies on important infectious diseases and disease syndromes of animals in the Kars region”.

Parsvaniya, B.V.; Nachkebiya, J.V. and Gudzhabidze, T.G. (1978):
“Presence of pathogenic clostridia in the internal organs of healthy slaughtered animals (cattle, sheep and swine)”.

“Submicron emulsions as vaccine adjuvants”.

“The animal disease situation in German Federal Republic”.

“Clostidial toxins”.

“Clostridium chauvoei in hens”.
References

“Studies of the incidence of blackquarter in Karnataka during 1979-1985”.

“Failure of Clostridium chauvoei vaccines to protect against blackleg”.

“Studies on C. oedematins”.

“Detection of neutralizing antibodies against alpha toxin of different Clostridium septicum strains in cell culture”.

“Correlation between some serological tests for measuring antibodies in sera of cattle vaccinated against blackleg”.

“Meat Hygiene Statistics”.
“Phylogenetic analysis and PCR detection of Clostridium chauvoei, Clostridium haemolyticum, Clostridium novyi types A and B, and Clostridium septicum based on the flagellin gene”.

“Molecular characterization of the diversity of isolates collected from two bovine slaughter houses: Analysis of cross-contamination”.

Seifert, H.S. (1975):
“Studies on the aetiology of anaerobic infection in cattle and sheep in Latin America. I-Field experiences and laboratory study”.

“Enviroment, incidence, aetiology, epizootiology and immunoprophylaxis of soil borne diseases in north-east Mexico”.

Shafie, F. (1983):
“Studies on blackleg in sheep”.
Sieiro, F. and Asterloa, F. (1964):
“A potency test in guinea pigs for the evaluation of Clostridium chauvoei bacterins”.

“Comparison of strain Clostridium chauvoei 49 in guinea pigs and mice”.

Srinivasan, V.A.; Reddy, G.S.; Roo, K.A. and Ueli Kihm(2001):
“Serological response of bovines to combined vaccine containing foot and mouth disease virus, rabies virus, Pasteurella multocida and Clostridium chauvoei antigens”.

“Studies on post vaccinal immune response of black quarter vaccine in cattle”.

“An outbreak of blackleg in the South of Sweden in 1998”.

“Immunization of sheep with multicomponent clostridial vaccines”.

“Protective cellular antigen of Clostridium chauvoei”.

“More rapid immunity from live than formalized Clostridium chauvoei vaccines in guinea pigs”. Veterinaryka Preparatov 20: 203.

Thomson, R.O. and Batty, I. (1967):
“Experimental clostridial oil emulsion vaccines”.

“The immunogenicity of a multicomponent clostridial oil emulsion vaccine in sheep”.

“Active immunization against blackleg and malignant oedema. II. Concentration and adsorbed Clostridium chauvoei”. Vet. Archiv., 30:40.

“Clostridial vaccination efficacy on stimulating and maintaining an immune response in beef cows and calves”.
References

“Clostridial antibody response from injection-site lesions in beef cattle, long-term response to single or multiple doses, and response in newborn beef calves”.

“Pathogenesis and pathology of blackleg in ruminants: The role of toxins and neuraminidase”.

“In vitro production of neuraminidase by Clostridium chauvoei”.

“Outbreak of clostridial myocarditis in calves”.

“The application of adjuvants to veterinary vaccines”.

“Procedure guide for ELISA micro titration test”.
Center for disease control, Atlanta, Georgia, US Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Williams, B.M. (1977):
“Clostidial myositis in cattle: bacteriology and gross pathology”.

“Cell cultures as a system for distinguishing between strains of Clostridium chauvoei and Clostridium septicum isolated in northeastern Mexico”.

“An alternative to the toxin neutralization assay in mice for the potency testing of the Clostridium tetani, Clostridium septicum, Clostridium novyi type B, and Clostridium perfringens type D epsilon components of multivalent sheep vaccines”.