

" Emotional intelligence among adolescents and its relationship to the family adjustment "

Summary:

The study aimed to determine the relationship between emotional intelligence and compatibility of family , and the study of the differences between adolescent boys and girls in both emotional intelligence and compatibility of family , as well as the study of the differences between adolescent boys and girls in both emotional intelligence and compatibility of family depending on the age group ( early adolescence , teenage medium , teenager late ) taking into account some relevant variables Bmngara study. The study was conducted on a sample of ( 540 ) of adolescent boys and girls of students in middle school and high school and university by ( 270 ) teenager , ( 270 ) adolescence , between the ages of ( 12–21 ) years , has been the application of a measure of emotional intelligence of preparation / Semitic Qattan 2006 , and the measure of compatibility of domestic preparation / researcher , and then process the data via the SPSS statistical package through Alageraúaan statisticians (T–test, One–way Anova) was the most important findings of the study:

- There is a positive correlation and statistically significant between the scores of teenagers on a scale of emotional intelligence , and their scores on a scale of domestic compatibility.
- There were statistically significant differences in emotional intelligence attributed to variable sex I have teenagers in favor of females.
- There were statistically significant differences in the compatibility of domestic attributable to variable sex I have teenagers in favor of females.
- I have a different emotional intelligence adolescent boys and girls in different age group for the older age group , " late teens".

– I have a different compatibility of domestic adolescents depending on the age group for the older age group , " late teens".